ABSTRACT

This study presents the findings of one of several studies intended to form a basis for the development of a student flow model for the Hawaii community college system. In order to discover why students, admitted for fall 1975 by a particular community college, did not enroll at that campus, a questionnaire was sent to 3,240 "no-shows." The total response rate was 66 percent. An analysis of the characteristics of the respondents showed that they were representative of the total "no-show" population in terms of applicant status, program, and sex. Results indicate that over half of the respondents were actively engaged in other activities: 28 percent working, 19 percent attending other educational institutions, and 4 percent serving in the military. Ten percent of the "no-shows" indicated financial reasons for not enrolling and 13 percent indicated the unavailability of the program or course desired. Data is further broken down in the report to indicate the reasons cited by respondents, by sex, by program (liberal arts or vocational), and by permanent home address (State of Hawaii or U.S. Mainland), by "new" or transfer student status, and by community college applied to. Detailed data is presented in tables appended to the text. (DC)

APPLICANT NO-SHOW SURVEY
COMMUNITY COLLEGES
FALL 1975

The Office of the Chancellor for Community Colleges was interested in finding out why students, admitted for Fall 1975 by a particular community college, did not enroll at that campus. This report describes a survey of these students (no shows) and summarizes their reasons for not enrolling. Data for the community colleges as a group are presented first, followed by brief summaries for each campus.*

A. Background

The following simple questionnaire was sent to 3,240 no shows:

A. Why did you not enroll?

1. _____enrolled in another school (please list) ______________________________
2. _____working
3. _____entered military service
4. _____financial reasons
5. _____health or personal problems
6. _____other (please specify) ____________________

*Windward Community College was not included in this survey because it had conducted its own study of no shows.

1. Percentage of Returns

Table 1 summarizes the rate of returns for each campus and for the community college total. The total rate was 66 percent, ranging from 72 percent at Kapiolani and 71 percent at Honolulu to 56 percent at Maui and Kauai. The total return rate is very good.* It is also interesting to note that the follow-up calls brought in an additional 26 percent of response for the total with efforts at Honolulu Community College (34 percent) being most fruitful.

*Nationally, the return rate for follow-up studies is low. Some institutions analyzed data when less than one-third of the sample responded.

Questionnaires were mailed on October 17, 1975, and by November 4, initial returns were 1,292 or 40 percent of the no-show population. On November 4, a list of no shows was sent to each campus indicating which ones had responded. Each campus tried to reach the non-respondents by phone to obtain their responses to the questionnaire. The deadline for this follow-up was November 17, and returns were all received within a week.

Despite the fact that the addresses of students are recent, the post office was unable to locate 76 no shows or 2.3 percent of the population. A study of the returns shows that 4 students had died and that 66 students had been incorrectly identified as no shows. These were all deleted, leaving a total of 3,094 in the population and a usable response total of 2,125.*

2. Data on Representativeness

Analysis of representativeness of returns is necessary to assess whether non-respondents are different from respondents. Representativeness is determined by matching demographic characteristics of the population (total no shows) and the respondent group. If most categories of the population are proportionately represented among the respondents, they are considered representative of the population. If significant discrepancies exist, findings must be interpreted with caution.

Table 2 includes data on representativeness of returns for the community college total as well as for each campus. If the respondents are truly representative of the population, for example, the proportions of males and females among respondents would be similar to proportions in the population. An examination of Table 2 indicates that the respondent group, for the community colleges as a whole, was representative of the population in terms of applicant status, program, and sex. The respondent group had a slight over-representation of Oahu residents and a slight under-representation of U.S. Mainland residents. In general, the respondents were representative of the no-show population.

B. Findings: Reasons for Not Enrolling

Figure 1 illustrates the reasons given by no shows for not enrolling in the community colleges in Fall 1975. The most common reason was work (28 percent), followed by "other" (24 percent), other school (19 percent), health/personal reasons, financial reasons, and military service. Slightly higher proportions of new than transfer applicants were working and were serving in the military.

*In addition, there were 13 responses which were not usable because of incorrect social security numbers.

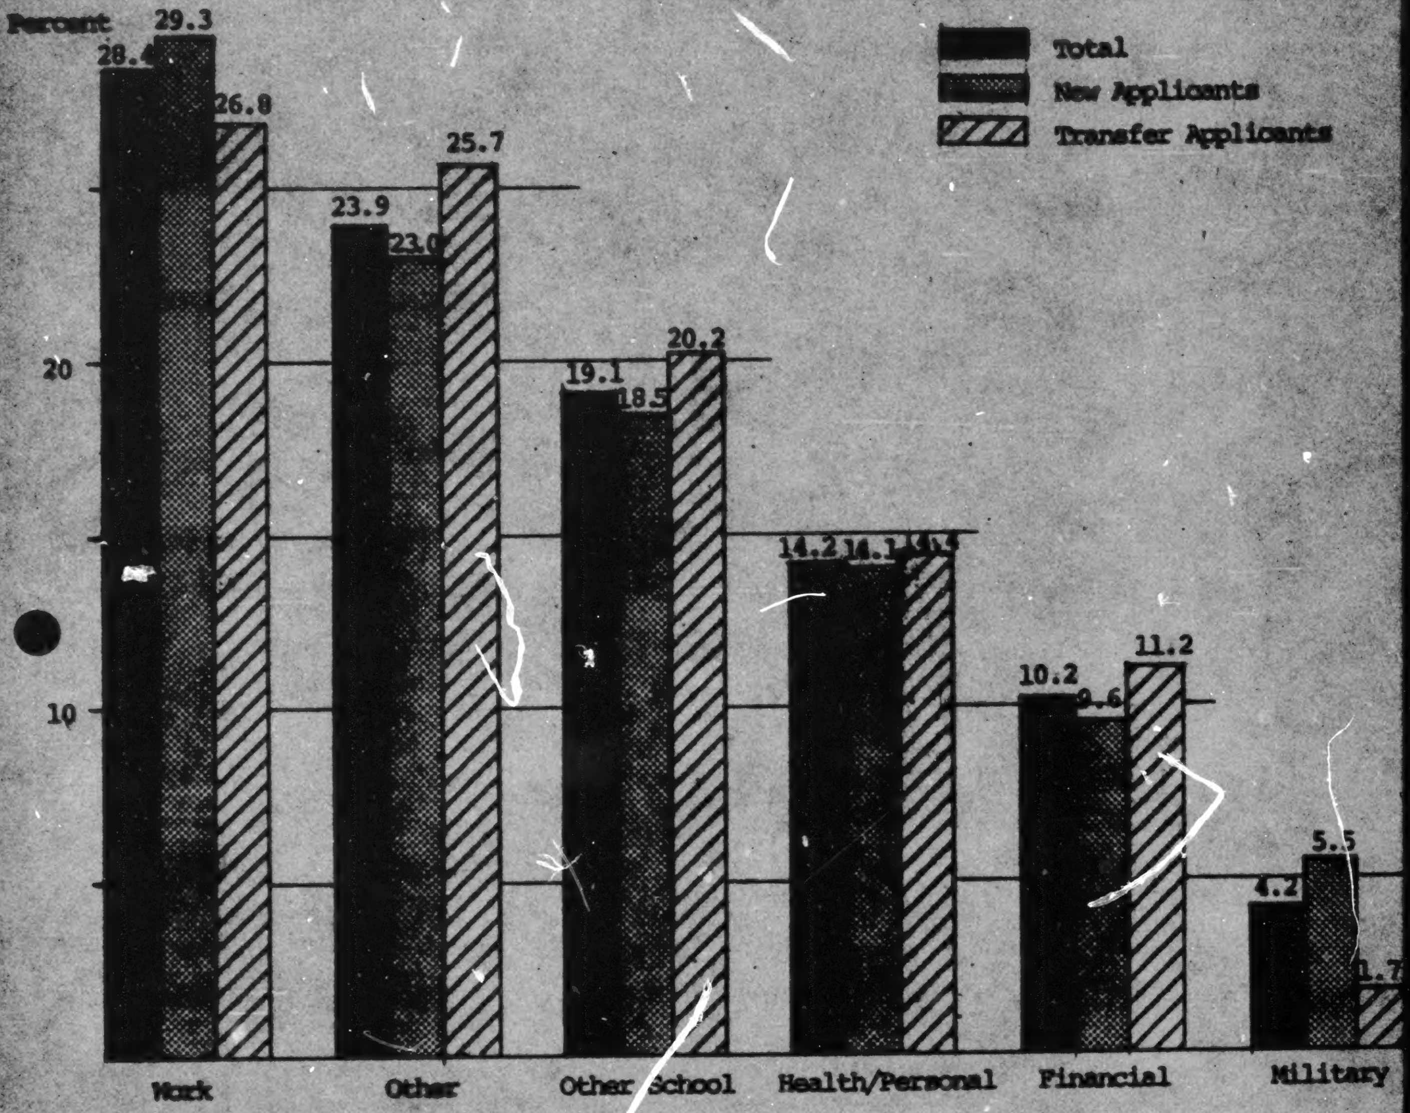
Reasons for Not Enrolling, By Applicant Status



The data in Table 3 summarize "reasons for not enrolling" by campus. "Work" was the most common reason for Honolulu (39 percent), Kapiolani (27 percent), and Kauai (30 percent) Community Colleges; "other school" for Hawaii Community College (34 percent); and "other reasons" for Leeward (30 percent) and Maui (26 percent) Community Colleges.

*H% based on Total Responses.

Further data on "reasons for not enrolling" by sex, program and permanent home address of respondents are found in Table 4. The most common reasons are given below for the community colleges as a whole:

1. Respondents, by Sex:

	Male	Female
Total	work (31%)	work (26%) other (26%)
New Applicant	work (33%)	work (26%)
Transfer Applicant	work (29%)	other (29%)

2. Respondents, by Program:

	Liberal Arts	Vocational Ed.	Unclassified
Total	other school (25%) work (25%)	work (34%)	other (36%)
New Applicant	work (26%) other school (25%)	work (34%)	other (34%)
Transfer Applicant	other school (23%) other (23%)	work (33%)	other (37%)

3. Respondents, by Permanent Home Address:

	State of Hawaii	U.S. Mainland
Total	work (30%)	other school (30%)
New Applicant	work (31%)	other school (35%)
Transfer Applicant	work (30%)	other (22%) financial (22%)

Table 5 furnishes details on "other school" and "other" reason for the community colleges as a whole. New applicants tended to matriculate at U.S. Mainland institutions of higher education, while transfer applicants studied at either the Manoa or Hilo campuses. In all, 132 were studying at Mainland institutions, 121 at Manoa or Hilo, 60 at community colleges, 137 at other institutions in Hawaii.

Among the "other reasons", the most common mentioned was the unavailability of the program or course desired by the respondent (268). This was cited by both new and transfer applicants.

Although the questionnaire did not include a question on whether the no show intended to continue his education at a later date, a number of respondents discussed this in their comments. In all, about 180 students expect to enter the community colleges in spring 1976 and about 70 at a later date.

C. Concluding Comment

It is indeed gratifying that close to 70 percent of no shows responded to the survey, due, in part, to the follow-up efforts of the six community colleges. This commendable rate of returns is further enhanced by the representativeness of the respondents so that generalizations about the no-show population can be made. It is significant that slightly over a half of the respondents were actively engaged in other activities: 28 percent working, 19 percent attending another educational institution, and 4 percent serving in the military. Of some concern are the 250 no shows (10 percent) who cited financial reasons and the 268 no shows (13 percent) who indicated the unavailability of the program or course desired by them.

All completed questionnaires were returned to the campuses so that they may follow up on the questions and suggestions made by respondents.
